

A Homage to The Masters: Andy Warhol

A Free In-Person Workshop Presented by
Cancer Support Community Atlanta

In our series, “A Homage The Masters” we will explore acrylic painting and look closely at the work of Andy Warhol. You will create your own original using his style. No artistic skill necessary... just a desire to explore and play with paints! You are invited to bring four 4x6' xeroxed copies of a black and white photo of any face to be used in class. We will have some generic options for use, also.

Andy Warhol began as a commercial illustrator and moved into creating art at his “Silver Factory”. Influenced by suffering from a disease in childhood, he was confined to his bed, and drew while listening to the radio and surrounding himself by movie star images on the wall. His work reflected his interest in pop stars and consumer culture, from the Marilyn Monroe series to the Campbell’s soup cans.
